gible, and sedulously conformed to the last results of Hebrew scholarship.

18. — A Commentary, Critical and Grammatical, on St. Paul's Epistle to the Ephesians. With a Revised Translation. By CHARLES J. ELLICOTT, B. D., Professor of Divinity, King's College, London, and late Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. Andover: Warren F. Draper. 1862. 8vo. pp. 190.

THIS Commentary — designed solely for the use of scholars — indicates, on the part of the author, an elevated standard of attainment, equally in philology and in the literature of biblical criticism, and the most laborious and faithful study of the Epistle to which it relates. It unites also the reverence of the Christian with the freedom of the critic. It lacks, however, a sufficiently extended introduction. It gives no synopsis of the Epistle, and this is especially to be deplored with reference to any writing of St. Paul; for though no author ever had more unity of purpose and definiteness of plan than he, his digressions are so numerous, and carry him so far, that the reader who follows him in them cannot always return with him to his point of departure. A brief analysis, marking the transitions of thought, and presenting compendiously the aim and scope of the entire Epistle, is all that is needed to render this volume one of the most perfectly finished works in the department of sacred letters to which it belongs.

19. — 1. The Elements of Logic: adapted to the Capacity of Younger Students, and designed for Academies and the Higher Classes of Common Schools. By CHARLES K. TRUE, D. D. Third Edition, revised. New York: Carlton and Porter. 1861. 16mo. pp. 176.
 2. Rudiments of Public Speaking and Debate; or, Hints on the Application of Logic. By G. J. HOLYOAKE, Author of "Mathematics no Mystery," "Logic of Facts," etc. With an Essay on Sacred Eloquence, by HENRY ROGERS. Revised by Rev. L. D. BARROWS. New York: Carlton and Porter. 1861. 16mo. pp. 230.

WE have already expressed our high appreciation of Professor True's Logic, and are glad to find that our opinion has been so extensively shared as to call for a third edition. A familiar treatise on the application of logic to public speaking was a desideratum which is now ably supplied by Mr. Holyoake. His treatment is both scientific and familiar, establishing sound principles, and illustrating them by
